

UNCSW ? UN Commission on the Status of Women

AGENDA:

Deliberation on the role of Artificial Intelligence and data economies in reinforcing modern forms of patriarchy and control over women's body.

BACKGROUND

The UN Commission on the Status of Women (UNCSW) is the principal global intergovernmental body exclusively dedicated to the promotion of gender equality and the empowerment of women. Established in 1946, it plays a crucial role in setting global standards on gender equality.

KEY ISSUES TO RESEARCH

1. AI and Gender Bias: How machine learning algorithms perpetuate existing gender biases in hiring, credit scoring, healthcare, and criminal justice.
2. Data Economies: The commodification of personal data and its disproportionate impact on women ? surveillance, deepfakes, and non-consensual intimate imagery.
3. Digital Patriarchy: How tech platforms reinforce patriarchal norms through algorithmic content curation, targeted advertising, and online harassment.
4. Reproductive Autonomy: The use of health-tracking apps and fertility data by governments and corporations to monitor and control women's reproductive choices.
5. The Digital Divide: Unequal access to technology as a barrier to women's economic and political participation.

RECOMMENDED READINGS

- UN Women, "Innovation and Technological Change, and Education in the Digital Age" (CSW67, 2023)
- Safiya Umoja Noble, "Algorithms of Oppression" (2018)
- Caroline Criado Perez, "Invisible Women: Data Bias in a World Designed for Men" (2019)
- UNESCO, "Artificial Intelligence and Gender Equality" Report (2020)
- Access Now, "Human Rights in the Age of Artificial Intelligence" (2018)

POSITION PAPER GUIDELINES

Your position paper should include:

- Your country's stance on AI regulation and digital rights
- Existing national policies on data protection and gender equality
- Proposals for international frameworks addressing AI-driven gender discrimination
- Concrete, actionable clauses for a draft resolution

RULES OF PROCEDURE

Standard UNCSW rules apply. Delegates should be prepared for moderated caucuses, unmoderated caucuses, and working paper drafting sessions. The committee will follow a single-agenda format.